

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

IN RECOGNITION OF WORLD WAR II VETERANS LT. LARRY CRANDELL, COL. JAMES PATILLO, STAFF SGT. JACK PATTERSON AND LT. BOB SCOTT

HON. LOIS CAPPS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 23, 2013

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to recognize World War II Veterans Lt. Larry Crandell, Col. James Patillo, Staff Sgt. Jack Patterson and Lt. Bob Scott from the 24th Congressional District.

Last week, these veterans were recognized for their service to our country at the luncheon and symposium "70 Years On . . . Celebrating the 'Bomber Boys' of World War II" presented in collaboration by the Pierre Claeysens Veterans Museum and the Channel City Club & Committee on Foreign Relations in Santa Barbara, California.

The stories these men shared at this event are an important contribution to our country's rich oral history and will serve to edify younger generations in our local community and across the nation. Their narratives are critical in creating a bond of gratitude and respect between the Greatest Generation and its descendants.

I join my Central Coast neighbors and colleagues in recognizing these exemplary individuals. These men and their stories of service are esteemed and cherished by the members of our community.

I extend my deepest gratitude to them for their willingness to share their experiences and for their service and sacrifice on behalf of our country.

CYBER INTELLIGENCE SHARING AND PROTECTION ACT

SPEECH OF

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 17, 2013

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 624) to provide for the sharing of certain cyber threat intelligence and cyber threat information between the intelligence community and cybersecurity entities, and for other purposes:

Mrs. LOWEY. Madam Chair, I rise in reluctant opposition to the bill. It is imperative that Congress take substantial action to bolster cybersecurity. The last major cyber bill to become law was the Federal Information Security Management Act in 2002, which was generations ago in the technology realm.

I would very much like to support legislation that would bolster our defenses and improve information sharing. But CISA falls short of taking the necessary steps to protect our computer and communications networks.

Public and private sector networks are constantly bombarded by cyber attacks. Instead of compelling those administering critical infrastructure to share information that would mitigate the consequences of those attacks, the bill sets up a voluntary framework that provides liability protections regardless of whether or not a business or operator of critical infrastructure provides the government with any information. I cannot support a bill that provides immunity to those who fail to take reasonable measures to protect networks.

Additionally, the bill does not require the private sector to remove irrelevant personal information before sharing information with the government and between private businesses. Government agencies receiving information from the private sector should not be given personally identifiable information that is of no security value. Yet, amendments to prevent this practice, which raises serious privacy concerns, were defeated in committee and prevented from being offered on the House floor.

In February, President Obama issued an executive order expanding information-sharing from the Department of Homeland Security and Department of Justice to private sector operators of critical infrastructure. It is important that Congress take action to expand upon the executive order to better protect our networks. Unfortunately, CISA would not adequately protect our cyber networks, and privacy concerns remain in this legislation.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to advance improved cybersecurity legislation.
